Figure 2 The most common and universal cause of skew is the difference in the effective lengths of the two transmission lines in the lane connecting a transmitter to a receiver.