Despite being a general-purpose microcontroller, the PIC10F's size and pin count make it a candidate for handling encryption algorithms that can fit into a small block of code. Pin counts range from six (left) to 14 (right).