During IC/package co-design, Agere Systems uses an information flow that equally weights simulation and measurement, allowing verification of key assumptions long before the design is complete.