Although both the differential and the single-ended probes provide some common-mode rejection, the differential probe (red) is much better behaved, providing a minimum rejection of more than 20 dB at 5 GHz. The single-ended probe (blue), on the other hand, provides only about 7 dB at 2.5 GHz.