The goal of ESS is to predict latent failures, which you can’t detect by electrical testing or visual inspection, to eliminate infant-mortality cases so that the product is in the useful-life phase of the bathtub curve at the end of ESS testing.